"Moving from Success to Significance"

Our lives shift into two halves – The midpoint is 30 to 50. The first half of our lives is spent in getting, gaining, learning and caring. The second half of our lives is managing the second half to be better than the first half. Making your second half count is managing your life into significance.

Yes, you are continually trading up or standing at the crossroads and each time you do, you'll have to make a decision. There are three choices in life to make: To gain something; to lose something; or trade something.

Many are not willing to make sacrifices to obtain significance. The old adage states, "One must give up to go up."

Unsuccessful people spend much of their lives standing at the crossroads hoping they can receive without giving up. But it rarely comes. You have to Give Up to Go Up. One must be willing to make sacrifices. There is no success without sacrifice. And persistence is the key and is an attitude that can be developed – Give in or Dig In.

One must develop character for a success journey. There is no substitute for it. You can buy brains, but you cannot buy character.

A person without character does what is easiest; he or she is controlled by moods, looks for excuses, quits when challenges occur, relies on external motivation, and his or her words and actions do not match and his or her choices lead to failure.

A person with character does what's right; is controlled by values, looks for solutions, perseveres when challenged, relies on internal motivation, and his/her words and actions agree. It is these choices that add up to success.

Ninety-nine percent of failures come from people who make excuses. Successful people persevere.

We make assumptions that we will have years to live this life...but life is but a vapor. Yes, there is the temporality of life. How are you going to live your life? Will you pursue worthwhile objectives? What do you hope to accomplish before you leave this life? Life has to be more than clothes, houses, and possessions. A life of giving to others and serving others. Remember, you determine the nature of your life by your choices. Unfortunately, we do not have a dress rehearsal. You have a choice to make a contribution on the side of good or bad. Dream and Dream big!!!! Put all your energy in defining your worth and ability. Help somebody – the world needs leaders – Life is short --- don't let it pass you by. God is sustaining YOU and Keeping YOU!!!

God moved me to GIVE UP; he moved me at my most successful peak in my career – to form my own Company, Young Enterprises, and embark on a journey to empower and teach leadership development and life empowerment for personal and professional growth. In the second half of my life I am living my passion. I am making an impact on the lives of men and women, more specifically women.

You, too, can move from Success to Significance!!!
